Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing you this letter to tell you some things you might not know from reading my resume. I am currently looking for a job in the software development industry, because technology has always been amusing and always at the front foot when it comes to advancement in the world. The opportunity to start my career with Infosys was presented by my college and enforced with the NEW bootcamp. This is an excellent opportunity and fit for me because of my love for programming, striving to always learn new things and looking to always achieve the best and maximizing potential.

The idea of working for Infosys is great, what the company stands for and what they have accomplished globally is something anyone should want to have their name on, or be proud to say they work for. During high school there was an opportunity to go to a competitive programming event named code wars. It was my first time ever working with two other programmers and collaborating to solve coding problems. The event set me up perfectly to the skill of communicating and collaborating with others, because of this I am comfortable to work in a team or alone.

With my upcoming graduation I will be hungry to start working and using my education to apply in a real world environment. There is no better place to do this than Infosys. I am ready to use all of my skills and previous learning experiences to contribute the excellence that this company holds. Thank you for reading my letter and considering my application. I look forward to discussing the position in further detail.

Sincerely,
Brayan Aviles
